An Hour of Hell.

Let us stroll through these gorgeously. furnished saloons, where the chief occupation is card-playing, and now through this large, green-baize door which turns noiselessly unon its well-oiled and richly balanced hinges. This apartment is more richly but less gaudily furnished. The glare of the chandeliers deep and vielding to our tread; the chairs use them unless we decide to join the play. All the decorations of the room bespeak comfort and quiet, in strange contrast with shine. flat cross biece two or three inches long at the than money -her very life.

> DREAM OF A QUAKER LADY .- There is a agony, 'it must be there; I have the assurand again left her to renew his search. After a long absence he came back, his face radiant with joy, and exclaimed, 'We have found it : that we could hardly see it ! The woman upon waking, immediately threw her pipe away, and never indulged in smoking again.

THE WONDERS OF MODERN GUNNERY .-When our war broke out, we had no cannon that could bombard Charleston from Fort Sumter, distance three and three-eigths miles. Now, we have guns that can reach the city, and go a mile beyond, from Morris Island. distance, five miles. And guns have been invented that will carry enormous missiles nine miles! One of these on a ship could bombard a city without being itself seen .-Thus, an enemy can destroy an object of attack while out of sight and hearing! For at seven miles distance, the curvature of the earth renders a ship invisible. Such is the progress of modern gunnery .- Republican

In Fort Wagner a sick rebel was found, holding in his hand a string connected with a fuse leading to the magazine. The rebels had so placed, telling him he could not live, and that after the fort should be full of Yankees he must pull the string, and so send them all, himself included, into eternity. But the wounded rebel, although almost dead when our men entered the fort, had a faint hope that perhaps he might live if properly attended, and gave that as a reason for not pulling the string. He was taken to an ambulance, and died while being conveyed to the hospital.
